

Happy August, Everyone!

The LICDP has been hard at work creating resources for folks facing familial conflict, specifically divorce (check some of them out below).

Adjusting to our "new normal" has not been easy, but the LICDP is more determined than ever to help families, and relationships, hardest hit by the COVID-19 Pandemic.

If you or someone you know is struggling in their relationship, let us give you valuable guidance today with a free consultation.

Find out how we can help you and yours today at www.licdp.com. Your family deserves the best. Your family deserves Collaborative.

Click Here to Visit our Website!

Emotions 101: How Collaborative Cares About You and Your Feelings

When you're battling it out with your ex-spouse in court, it can get ugly- and you likely do not have a professional there to help pick up the pieces.

In the Collaborative Divorce Model, your Family Support Specialist ("FSS") is with you every step of the way to provide guidance on handling emotions, tips on effective communication, co-parenting advice, and more.

CLICK HERE to read an article written by one of our Family Support Specialists, Alyse Parise, LCSW, on how our professionals can support you and your family during the Collaborative process.

Lifestyle Analysis: Who Needs One?

The truth of the matter is, in an ideal world, every Collaborative Divorce would involve a Lifestyle Analysis.

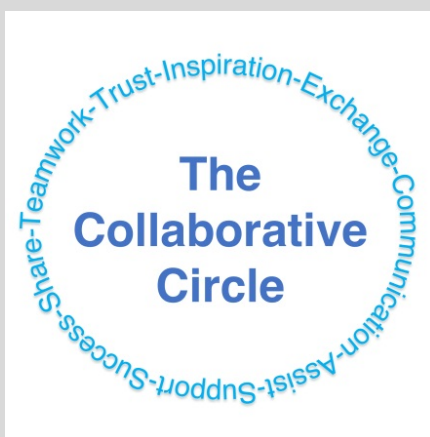

This financial review is the best way to establish the economic marital standard of living and in the Collaborative Model, a Financial Neutral can perform this analysis as an unbiased third party- thus establishing the marital standard from an objective standpoint.

CLICK HERE to read more about what the Lifestyle Analysis entails and why it is crucial to a fair and equitable divorce, directly from one of the LICDP's financial neutrals, Stephen Linker, CPA, CVA, CFF, FACFEI

The Collaborative Circle

The Collaborative Circle is a series of monthly conversations about various topics related to divorce and how the Collaborative process can benefit families.

This month's conversation focused on what happens when a spouse is intentionally hiding assets and therefore not being transparent in a model that requires full transparency.

CLICK HERE TO WATCH OUR JULY EPISODE!

