

Happy New Year

From The Long Island Collaborative Divorce Professionals

As 2020 comes to a close, the LICDP wants to thank everyone who has supported our mission this year- to help families make informed choices about how best to proceed throughout any family crisis, including divorce and beyond, with the assistance of supportive, collaboratively trained professionals who are committed to educating, empowering and enlightening each family about their options outside of the court process.

Click Here to Watch our LICDP Year End Video!

The Collaborative Divorce Model puts the needs of the children at the center of the process.

LICDP's Amy Reinstein-Augenstein, Esq., LCSW discusses the advantages that the Collaborative Divorce Model offers to help facilitate a co-parenting framework that works best for the children. Your family deserves Collaborative.

Click Here to Read "Co-Parenting and Collaborative- Why It Works"

One of the most common marital assets is the marital residence, or the home.

LICDP's Pamela J. Pollack, Esq. addresses different issues that arise concerning the marital residence during a divorce proceeding and how the Collaborative Model helps the divorcing pair come to an agreement that works for both parties in a win-win scenario, and not the typical win-lose outcomes seen in traditional litigated divorce.

Click Here to Read "So, Who Keeps The House?: The Marital Residence and Divorce"

[LICDP] | [844-542-3700] | [admin@vazlaw.com]

